

WHAT NOW?

HERE'S WHAT HAPPENS
AFTER YOUR COVID-19 TEST.

Thank you for taking the first step in keeping yourself, your loved ones and New York City safe.

Below are some next steps you can expect after getting tested.

1

I'VE TAKEN THE TEST FOR COVID-19. WHAT'S NEXT?

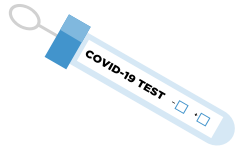

- Fill out the Testing Positive form.
- Most test results come back in 48 hours.
- This information will come from your health practitioner or medical facility.

2

WHAT IF I TEST POSITIVE?

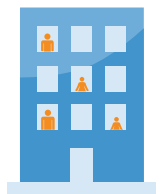

- A positive diagnosis means you have COVID-19.
- You will have to safely separate at home or in a hotel immediately for 14 days.

3

I'VE TESTED POSITIVE. WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS?

- Advice and assistance will be provided by your doctor.
- You may get a call from a Contact Tracer to offer help and discuss next steps.
- Together, you will discuss if you need more medical attention.
- If you need to temporarily leave your home to protect those around you, the Contact Tracer will find you a free hotel room where you will receive meals and other support.
- If you can safely stay at home, the Contact Tracer can arrange food and medical deliveries.
- Together you will create a list of everyone you've been in contact with in the days before you became ill.
- The Contact Tracer will then get in touch with them. They will encourage them to get tested and safely separate themselves to stop the spread of the virus.
